

In our years of doing different projects ranging from web sites to web applications to banners and logos and basically anything that had to be seen the topic of colour coordination always comes up. In terms of web sites and web applications, the process of choosing complimenting colours may be easier if you use this free tool.

Take a look at Colour Scheme Designer . It gives you the option to choose one, two, and three or more specific colors. Afterwards it automatically chooses a range where they all work! Awesome huh? What's more, on the web site you can preview two distinct 'modes' of the colours you choose, a 'light' mode and a 'dark' mode. You can even export your settings. We thought this was a great feature basically because once exported you can make minor edits so that it can fit into your application or give it to your web site designer for them to implement into your new web site. Either way, Colour Scheme Designer is a nice tool to easily and quickly can an overview (visually) of how your colours can work together.
